Internship and the Endicott Experience

Since its founding in 1939, Endicott College has embraced the concept of applied learning and has been a pioneer in requiring structured internships in every program of study. This model, which thrives as a central part of the Endicott curriculum today, is dependent upon a strong academic foundation at its core. In recent years, the Semester Internship and Senior Thesis have evolved into the keystone of the College's baccalaureate curriculum, which blends theory and practice. Today, all majors at Endicott include intensive internship, practicum, and/or clinical components.

ENDICOTT COLLEGE INTERNSHIP PROGRAM

The mission of Endicott College is to instill in students an understanding of and an appreciation for professional and liberal studies. Deeply woven within this philosophy is the concept of applied learning, which has been the hallmark of Endicott. Linking classroom and off-campus work experience through required internships remains the most distinguishing feature of the College.

Endicott has a vision for the total development of the individual within a community that fosters an appreciation of diversity, international awareness, community service, and moral and ethical values. Endicott is an innovative and vibrant, student-centered institution that supports undergraduate and graduate students in their pursuit of knowledge.

Common threads run through the fabric of the Endicott experience: increased self-confidence, stronger professional skills and technological competencies, and perhaps the most valued of all, lives open to change.

Field-Based Learning Program

The Structure

The Semester Internship supports the goal of Endicott's four-year degree program. Students complete a structured and professional experience that includes the following:

- An internship field experience that is 13-14 weeks in duration depending on the academic calendar
- Full-time involvement at the internship site, with students returning to campus one day, every other week for required campus-based seminars designed to integrate theory and practice
- A setting that is directly relevant to the student's academic major
- Supervision by an Endicott faculty member in the student's major area of study, including on-site evaluation of performance
- An individual Learning Agreement with specific goals developed by the student in collaboration with the Site Sponsor and Faculty Supervisor
- Other Model: A Distance Internship with an online seminar is an option for students completing an international internship or an internship away from campus. The seminar component of the course is taught by Endicott faculty

Students earn 12 academic credits for the successful completion of the Semester Internship course. Specific requirements vary by major, though all students are required to complete full-time field work throughout the academic semester, to complete the Learning Agreement, and to receive a formal evaluation by their Site Supervisor. Some majors require students to draw on their internship experiences in developing their Senior Thesis project.

Sponsorship

Over the years, sponsors have come to recognize the value of an ongoing relationship with the Endicott College Internship Program in filling strategic organizational needs and contributing to the professional development of the students. The Internship Program welcomes prospective sponsors to post internship opportunities.
